Women Political Leaders Global Forum (WPL) Annual Global Summit 2017 “We Can Do It!”

28-30 November, 2017
Harpa Concert and Conference Centre Reykjavik, Iceland
OVERVIEW

Iceland is the global champion of equality between women and men. The WPL Annual Global Summit 2017 – titled “We Can Do It!” – applauds the political action of Iceland, which demonstrates that gender equality does not have to remain a theory, but can become reality. In this spirit, the WPL Annual Global Summit provides the forum for exchange on best practices around the globe: of leadership, legislation and political agenda-setting that creates results. The WPL Annual Global Summit presents a unique opportunity for participants to discuss global challenges, exchange best practice, and to take part in political dialogue that reflects the influence and worldwide perspectives of today’s female decision-makers. This year’s WPL Annual Global Summit is co-hosted by the Government and the Parliament of Iceland. Without the support of the City of Reykjavik an important part of the Summit would have not been possible. Other partners are the Council of Women World Leaders (CWWL), Harvard University, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) and the United Nations. WPL thanks its corporate supporters.

The venue of the WPL Annual Global Summit 2017 is the Harpa Concert and Conference Centre in Reykjavik.

WPL is pleased to welcome the Council of Women World Leaders (CWWL). The CWWL is composed of 66 current and former women Presidents and Prime Ministers. It is the only organisation in the world dedicated to women heads of state and government. The CWWL will convene its members on the occasion of the WPL Annual Global Summit.

Sesión Plenaria- Un cambio en el Orden Global? Repensando las Políticas de Paz, Seguridad y Defensa
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Silfurberg 2nd floor

Protracted conflicts, cyber threats, political ruptures and challenges make the concept of durable peace seem elusive. It is a moment to question the traditional view of defence and security, and instead shift focus on peace. For sustainable peace and security, for efficient defence, women need to be in the center, and take leading roles. However, between 1992 and 2011 less than 4% of signatories to peace agreements were women. There are currently only 16 female Ministers of Defence globally. The panel will address from the perspective of female experts questions of security in the context of mutating conflicts and the role of allies from the Global North and South can help bring durable peace or not. Moreover, the panel will explore ways to increase women’s leadership in conflict (preventing, mitigating, and resolving) and combat.

Séance Plénière - Aller de l'avant: vivre le numérique?
Sesión Plenaria- Mirando hacia adelante: viviendo digitalmente?
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Silfurberg, 2nd floor

New technologies fuse the physical and digital worlds. They have a social impact and can represent opportunities for economic growth, more inclusive social policies and better-connected societies. Politics and power dynamics go hand in hand with digital means of communication that reach millions of people in seconds. However, this revolution comes with challenges such as rapid labour market transformation and inequality in access to and management of technologies. Currently only 46% of the global population uses the internet, which means we are still far from unleashing the full potential of the digital revolution. Increasing the number of women internet users, enabling access to technology and fostering female entrepreneurship can help close the gender gap.

Climate Change is affecting the entire world. “Long-term indicators of climate change such as increasing carbon dioxide concentrations, sea level rise and ocean acidification continue unabated. Arctic sea ice coverage remains below average and previously stable Antarctic sea ice extent was at or near a record low” (WMO, 2017). The 23rd session of the Conference of the Parties (COP23) has been the occasion to strengthen the commitment through for example the InsuResilience Global Partnership for Climate and Disaster Risk Finance and Insurance Solutions which brings together G20 countries in partnership with 49 of the most vulnerable countries. This session will lay out the facts, draw from the experience of country representatives and deepen the discussion of innovative solutions to reduce the carbon footprint from the private sector.

16:05-18:05  Labor Market Inclusion - Powered by Digital
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Rima A, 1st floor
The latest World Economic Forum Global Gender Gap Report has found the workplace gender gap will now not be closed for 217 years. At a time when digital and technological skills are more important than ever before, the world is facing a significant gender digital divide. 250 million fewer women than men use the internet; 200 million fewer women own a mobile phone. This divide is keeping too many women out of the workforce and limiting their economic potential. However, the digital revolution opens new windows of opportunity to advance gender equality. The digital revolution, characterized by artificial intelligence, big data, cloud computing and mobile robotics could improve female participation in the work place and enhance the economic and social autonomy of women. Building upon best practices and case studies, this session will examine how investing in policies and programs to support technological training and infrastructure can improve labour inclusion in new, radical and exciting ways.
All You Need is STEM
Tout ce dont vous avez besoin c'est les STEM

Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Silfurberg A, 2nd floor

Governments, policy-makers and stakeholders recognise the need to increase female student achievement in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) as STEM fields are increasingly important in ensuring countries’ economic growth. Every girl needs competencies in STEM as preparation for tertiary education and the workplace. The benefits of STEM education may only be seen much later in a woman’s career when they have to adapt to a changing work environment. Women are continuously under-represented in fields of STEM. According to UNESCO, only 30% of researchers worldwide are women. Similarly, according to the US Commerce Department, only 24% of STEM jobs are held by women, with individual disciplines like Engineering having a significant gender bias. Biases against women in STEM affect all aspects of academia, including hiring, citation, publishing and even teaching.

STEM occupations are growing nearly twice as fast as non-STEM occupations. In addition, STEM workers earn 26% more than their non-STEM counterparts. Promoting the active role of women in STEM fields contributes to achieving economic growth as well as diminishing gender disparity in economic status. This session will discuss solutions for attracting, supporting and maintaining more women in STEM, drawing on best practice examples from around the world. How can policy-makers and companies work together to make a difference?

Speakers:
- An Capoen, Member of Parliament and WIP Ambassador, Belgium
- Mazin Jumaah, President of Royal University for Women
- Radiye Sezer Katircioğlu, Head of the Turkish Equal Opportunity Committee in command as a strategic weapon to humiliate, demoralize and dehumanize the “enemy”; to weaken the integrity of the opposing ethnic group; to destabilise communities and sow terror. Important steps have been taken by the international community to address violence against women (SC resolution 1325) and recognize the act of rape and violence against women during conflicts as a crime against humanity. However, many regions around the world continue to treat rape and sexual violence as a subject of taboo. This workshop will address practices for preventing violence against women in war, empowering women to not be victims, to remove stereotypes, and for ensuring perpetrators are brought to justice.

16:05-18:05  Motherhood has No Borders
Why Would Access to Maternal Healthcare be different?
La maternité n’a pas de frontières
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Silfurberg B, 2nd floor

‘No woman should die giving life’ - This session aims to highlight the need for collective efforts amongst stakeholders to prioritise and streamline maternal health into relevant policies that will reach vulnerable groups of women. This session will be an opportunity to build upon the Outcome Declaration from 2017 meetings (Malta and the European Parliament) which had as objectives gathering concrete policy recommendations to ensure quality access to maternal healthcare for all women. The lack of scientific data and information on maternal healthcare leads to maternal health not being given the policy priority it deserves, and ultimately prevents women from accessing the care they need. WPL, with the support of MSD for Mothers, is working on a mapping project that will collect input from WPL members. It will explore what your role can be in helping to address national access to maternal health and subsequently minimise maternal mortality.

09:15-10:15  Plenary Session - Make Trade, Not War
Séance Plénière - Faire du commerce, pas la guerre Sesión Plenaria - Haz comercio, no guerra
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Silfurberg, 2nd floor
While war closes boarders, horizons and opportunities, trade brings down barriers, broadens cooperation and connects people. The relationship between international trade and gender is robust. Women who benefit from a better access to the global markets open new economic opportunities for themselves, their families, their communities. Advancing gender equality in the labour force could add US $28 trillion to global GDP by 2025. The relationship between trade and gender equality requires an understanding of economic and social dynamics in order to develop policies that catalyse economic development while also promoting women’s empowerment and equality. Participants will take stock of current trade policy’s contribution to the economic empowerment of women, raise awareness of gender issues in trade, and consider how trade can promote the advancement of gender equality through a combination of multi-stakeholder engagement and a progressive approach to sustainable development.

Policy Focus Sessions

13:30-15:30  Action! How to Turn the Sustainable Development Goals into Reality
In cooperation with the UNSDG Action Campaign
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Bjortuloft 6th floor Adopted in 2015 by world leaders, the UN’s Sustainable Development Agenda includes goals to be achieved by 2030. These targets range from ending poverty and hunger to reducing inequality; to action on climate change, ecosystem restoration, and shift towards sustainable consumption and production; to promoting peace. Goal number 5 calls for greater empowerment of women recognizing that without it sustainable development is simply unachievable. As the SDGs are far more ambitious than their predecessor, the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), they require more political commitment, economic resources, solidarity and cohesion to become a reality for everyone, everywhere. Maintaining the momentum of the post-2015 development agenda requires innovative ideas and engagement with partners on all sectors. This discussion will involve good practices to address challenges into making the fulfilment of the SDGs a reality.

13:30-15:30 Healthy Women - Healthy Economies
Femmes en bonne santé - Économies saines
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Silfurberg 2nd floor

“Healthy Women, Healthy Economies” (HWHE) is an innovative public-private partnership initiated under the auspices of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC), Merck, and the U.S. and Philippine governments. This initiative is meant to advance women’s health and well-being as well as increase their economic participation. HWHE brings together evidence about women’s health and well-being and its impact on economic growth with best practices that governments, employers, and non-governmental organizations can follow. Integral to this effort is the WPL Policy Forum in which female political leaders share their experiences in advancing women’s labour force participation through better health. The session focuses on solutions to reduce barriers that prevent women from entering, rising, and thriving in the workforce. The objectives of this panel discussion are to (i) increase participants’ awareness of the relationship between women’s empowerment and health, especially economic empowerment, and (ii) discuss examples of policy initiatives that can be implemented at the country level.

13:30-15:30  Women, Business, and the Law
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Visa 1st floor
In most countries around the world, men and women are by law treated differently. Rules and regulations continue to constrain women’s entrepreneurship and employment opportunities. Access to finance, property rights, legal procedures are just a few of the areas where laws make a gender distinction. Such legal restrictions limit women’s ability to make economic decisions in a variety of ways. Furthermore, these legal disparities can have far-reaching economic consequences on the labour market. This session will address some of the most important gender-based legal differences in the labour market and explore possibilities that will allow women to relish their full economic potential and participation.

13:30-15:30  All About Women - Gender Equality Mainstreamed
In Cooperation with the OECD
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room:Rima B, 1st floor
What happens to gender equality issues in social policy design? Well-designed policies and institutions can help level the playing field between women and men, but a whole-of-government approach is needed. Policies and budgets must be examined in terms of their different impacts on men and women and boys and girls. "Women’s issues" cannot be considered separately from the rest of the social protection system. Mainstreaming gender requires evaluating gendered effects across issues and at every stage of the policy cycle. Two OECD experts will present most recently assessed gender gaps in the areas of employment, education, entrepreneurship, social protection and public life. They will describe positive examples and trends in the practice of gender mainstreaming, and discuss the relevance of adopting gender lenses in social policy design for greater impact. National representatives will discuss how gender differences have been considered in social and economic policies in their own countries, and how best to improve policies’ quality and effectiveness for the benefit of both women and men.

- Eva Kristin Hansen, First Vice-President Parliament, Norway

13:30-15:30 Roots of Power: Property Rights
Les racines du pouvoir: droits de propriété
In Cooperation with the African Development Bank
Venue: Harpa Conference Centre, Room: Rima A, 1st floor
In the majority of developing countries, women working in agriculture do not own the land they work on. Land tenure of women is far from parity. At the 72nd UN General Assembly this year one of the core challenges discussed was the situation of women and girls in rural areas (resolution 70/132). This has marked a crucial area of greater involvement for governments, international organisations/institutions and civil society to contribute to the fulfilment of the Sustainable Development Goals. It is also the focus of work at the CSW in 2018. “Women’s employment in agriculture has declined over the most recent two decades, but it continues to be the most important source of employment for women in low-income and lower-middle-income countries[...] [However] rural women are at the bottom of the earnings ladder” (UN, 12, 2017). This session will be an opportunity to collect good practices and address challenges in the process of economic empowerment of women through access to property rights.
